"domestic cat," in order to deceive them, and to solve into thinking that it is an edible animal. Why it should ever have been called a guinea-pig in the first place is not obvious. There is nothing, beyond its obesity, to allude to in this respect. The name was first given to the Indian pig by its translator, an account of its introduction into Europe; and then for some reason it crept into the title of "guinea-pig" and when a long-haired variety appeared, the new name was called, from some unknown connection of geographical ideas in the dealers' minds, the "Abyssinian guinea-pig." Another variety, with still longer hair, has been named in the Zoological Gardens—possibly because it came from Paris, Lyons, and Peru—after the name of the "Peruvian" guinea-pig. These, however, are not the common or garden guinea-pigs of commerce. Some of them are as shaggy as sky-torrents and present as great difficulties as that

A Madras paper publishes the following:-
 "Mr. Father R. Page, the Superior of the Convent at Bombay, was a fellow passenger on their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess Connaught, by the T. & O. steamer Cathart, from Calcutta to London, on the 10th inst. The Bishop, of the same mission, has been appointed domestic chaplain to the Duke, and will assume charge of his ecclesiastical duties shortly."
 Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is expected to visit India, and will attend at the services at St. Alban's, Elcborn, and presentation of a pair of candlesticks for altar in Mr. Macdonoghie's Church, being to us evidence of this fact. Father Black's appointment as Domestic Chaplain to the Duke of Connaught was made a couple of days ago. He is now en route for England. Father Pagon's voyage out.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to any page under a person who understands the Chinese language would be sufficient to find out what the work will be found indispensable to Europeans residing in China, and to the natives of China, who are desirous of acquiring the very few initials of the Chinese perfectly acquainted to parties resident in England and interested in China. It cannot but be invaluable accessorially.

Comprising upwards of two thousand in quarto pages.

A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Purchasers of SIX or more Copies.

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and dark smudges, particularly along the right edge and bottom. A vertical crease is visible near the center. The left edge shows the binding of the book, with dark stitching or thread visible. The right edge is slightly irregular and dark.
